Under the Dire Influence of Occult ism the Husband, She Declares Is Led About by "that Old Woman Just Like - Horse."

James, of No. 207 West Thirty-sixth street, is timidity. She says so herself Mrs. James weighs about 300 pounds and she figures in the public prints because she appeared in the West Side Court to prosecute Mrs. Adelaide Retiger, of No. 260 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street. Mrs. Retiger, charged with ring ing the door-bell of Mrs. James's home at 1 o'clock in the morning and calling loudly for the husband of Mrs. James. was placed under $500 bonds to keep the

"Think of the nerve of her." said Mrs James to-day. "She asked my husband to go on her bond.

"I stood it for eleven years." Mrs James continued, "because I am a timid woman, but when my husband got to taking his regular weekly bath at Mrs. Retiger's house I just naturally had to do something. I say that when a married man refuses to bathe at home it is time for his wife to put her foot down if she's got a bath tub in the house, and goodness knows, there's nobody on the block got a nicer bathroom than our'sopen plumbing, tiled floor and everything open plumbing, tiled floor and everything like that.

"Lately she has you in the habit of camping on the stoop of my house and sending colored boys in with messages. I even stood for that, but when she came around at 1 o'clock in the morning and tried to break in 1 had her arrested and subjected her to the humiliation of a ride in the patrol wagon.

"You can see her nerve, when she asked my husband to go on her bond. Maybe he did. That spell she has got on him is awfully strong. Why, one night Harry and I were coming out of the American Theatre—we had just seen "The Resurrection." and I think it is a perfectly lovely play—when Mrs. Retiger stepped up, took h! by the hand and led him off like a horse. I was so astonished that they were out of sight before I could move and I had to come home alone. "But I know what I'll do," concluded

"But I know what I'll do," concluded Mrs. James. "If this taing keeps up any longer I'll go to a fortune teller and get one of those spells myself." A Harmless Little Man.

Mrs. Retiger lives in a handsome, tastefully furnished house at No. 350 West One Hundred and Eighteenth street. Books and pictures of the best class are seen on every hand. She was very frank in discussing her relations with the Jameses.

any woman could see in him is more than I can imagine.

"Mrs. James used to ask me to take him to the races and show him a good time, and I used to do it to oblige her. I lived downtown then. When I moved up here he used to visit me once in a while. One day he walked off with the key and had a duplicate made. Since then he has been accustomed to come here and make himself at home, but if he ever shows up again he will meet with a warm reception.

"All I went down to the house for was to get my key. When I knocked at the door and asked if Mrs. James was in I was insulted by a person whose name, I am told, is Butts. He threatened to have me arrested."

Because some one yelled "fight," and it was mistaken for the word "fire," a panic was caused among the 1,100 girls in the cigar factory of the American Cigar Company, at Nos. 447 and 449 East Fifty-second street, to-day.

Many of the girls were severely bruised in the crush on the stairs. The alarm spread to all five floors of the building and in a few minutes the fire-escapes in the front of the building, the stairways and the roof were crowded with frightened girls.

Several policemen ran to the building and tried to calm the frightened girls. M. Lefkowitz, one of the bookkeepers in the building, ran to the foot of the stairs on the ground floor and pulled out three of the young women who had fallen and were being trodden on by the others. Supt. H. Grossman, of the factory, also rescued several of the girls from the rush in which they had fainted paring to jump from the fire-escapes. $250 counsel fee in behalf of Anna C Lee, of No. 157 St. Ann's avenue, Bronx her suit for a separation from Walter D. Lee, manufacturer of dumb-waiter at No. 2440 Broadway, Jacob Marks told an odd tale of domestic woe to Justice Greenbaum in the Supreme Court today. Decision was reserved.

The Lees were married by the Rev Dr. Shaw, Feb. 12, 1901, and the unhappy wife says in her complaint that "unkind, harsh and brutal conduct" forced her to leave him in the fifth month of their marriage. He coaxed her back, she says, but was again harrying her with small annoyances. In February she appealed to Rev. Dr. Shaw to talk to her husband and make an effort for domestic peace. When she returned to her home, she says she was locked out and had to get in by vay of the fire escape.

Didn't Agree with Roosevelt.

The dominie's efforts were seemingly not successful, for the wife says Mr Lee continued to abuse her, applying vile epithets to her, and occasionally physical violence. She says he repeatto them she would have to sleep with he baby on the fire-escape, for he didn't purpose to have his rest disturbed. Lee had several shops, and on June 15, Mrs. Lee says, after an unusually bad breakfast scene, she received this letter from one of the shops.

"Dear Anna: By the time you get this I will be apart from you forever, as you wished this morning. I forgive you for all you have done to me, but Anna, you have a long road to travel. In my desk, in the top shelf, you will find a blue envelope. You will find three policies, two for $1,000 and one for $500, payable to Anna C. Lee. There are other papers that will tell you of all that belongs to me, and I hereby give all to you, Anna C. Lee. Good-by and forever, WALTER D. LEE."
